Editor's Notes

It puzzles and saddens me that the music industry acknowledges and rewards the trash spewed by Eminem with three Grammy awards. There is no "redeeming social value" in rap music--and I use the term "music" generously. It is indeed a sad commentary on American pop culture that its music has declined to the state of noisy, bad poetry set to raucous, unimaginative rhythm.

"The Revelation of the Drawn Curtain" ~The Electrical Revolution in Great Britain~

by James R. Tennyson

The British recording companies, His Master's Voice (HMV) and Columbia in particular, were major players in the dramatic events of 1924-25, when the recording studios adopted the electronic recording method. Lewis Sterling, the president of English Columbia, in fact, having heard pirated test pressings of the new process, made a dash to New York in an eleventh hour attempt to convince Western Electric not to grant The Victor Talking Machine Company exclusive rights to their system. He succeeded, and changed the course of the new era. The English companies began issuing electrical recordings at virtually the same time (often the same recordings) as their American affiliates. I have often assumed because of this, that everything was essentially the same...recordings, marketing policies, and machines on both sides of the Atlantic. This assumption was a mistake: the British have always done things in their own special way and this area of endeavour was no exception.

I first realized this while browsing through some 1927 issues of The Gramophone magazine. Founded in 1923, it was the first audiophile publication aimed at the home market, rather than for the trade, like The Talking Machine World, for example. Consequently, in the wake of the introduction of electrical recording, and the myriad of complaints by readers about how the new recordings sounded, the magazine's "Expert Committee" produced a series of articles giving the reader some hints as to how one could get the most out of the average home gramophone, which often found the new records rather heavy going. The Committee consisted of among others Percy Wilson, the Technical Editor of the magazine [who was still writing on technical matters in the 1970s!], H. V. Little, a mathematician of note, and several others of a musical and scientific bent.

In the August issue, after a long discussion of diaphragm stiffness, and what degree to clamp the gaskets, they go on to say:

"The latest attempts to overcome these faults and make the diaphragm practically independent of the nature of the edge is found in the Orthophonic Victrola. We have not yet had an opportunity of testing one of these instruments, and cannot therefore judge how successful the method has been."

This surprised me: the fact that in August of 1927, the Committee...some of the best non-professional and professional audiophiles in Britain...had never heard an Orthophonic Victrola or a machine of similar type; the reason being that HMV would not introduce their version, called the HMV Re-Entrant Gramophone, until the fall of 1927!

So what DID they have to play the new electrical sides if not an Orthophonic clone of some sort? They had, after its gala introduction in November 1925, "The NEW His Master's Voice...the Gramophone that Eliminates Surface Noise." (Shades of the copywriting for the NEW Edison.) "This new Gramophone gives equal prominence to highest treble and lowest bass! The secret of its amazing realism lies in the design of a special tone chamber inside the cabinet and a new soundbox." This was the HMV Number 4, which used a mica diaphragm in the time-tested way, but the needle arm was pivoted between two pins adjusted by a screw; no tension springs like the old Exhibition or the Victrola No. 2 soundboxes.

The new machine was launched with quite a degree of fanfare, rather like Victor Day in North America. And of course the company trotted out its stars to give ecstatic testimonials for the double-spread ads. Sir Edgar Elgar, the greatest British composer and the star in HMV's crown, said "Without a doubt the most important invention in the history of

ANNOUNCE

A NEW GRAMOPHONE

WHICH IS THE GREATEST ADVANCE EVER MADE IN THE SCIENCE of MUSICAL REPRODUCTION

Oramophone is exactly like any standard "His Master's Voice" instrument. The secret of its amazing realism lies in the design of a special tone chamber inside the cabinet, and a new sound-box. This result has been attained in "His Master's Voice" laboratories by the application of an entirely new scientific principle of sound amplification.

This new Gramophone gives equal prominence to highest treble and lowest bass.

Orchestral instruments that were previously indistinct or unheard on the record are now reproduced at their true value.

The tone is rich, round and mellow, and suggests the realism of an actual performance in the room.

the Gramophone!" The star conductors followed suit and Eugene Goosens, the dynamic young enfant terrible of the day, said "The new Instrument is a prodigious achievement in quality and volume; it far surpasses any Gramophone I have ever heard!"

Heady stuff indeed! And what's more, it was HMV's own product with not a cent of royalties going to Western Electric for the use of Maxfield and Harrison's Orthophonic Victrola patents. But then, the English record and gramophone business was in far better shape in 1924-25 than that of their American cousins. Sales were brisk. HMV had no need of a super-phonograph like the Victor Credenza Orthophonic to jolt a faltering business out of the doldrums. All that was necessary was a machine that would play the new recordings to good advantage ...and THAT they designed.

What the clever boys at Hayes, Middlesex (HMV's headquarters) had done was use their acoustic common sense and squeeze a long...but not folded...horn into a standard cabinet and in combination with their new soundbox they produced a machine which by all accounts sounded very good -- especially in a country with no Orthophonic Victrola for comparison.

The Gramophone editorial which described it equated its mechanism to that of the Apollo Gramophone, one of many audiophile machines that could be found on the British market. I have no cut-away view of the HMV product, but I do have one for the Apollo. If one examines the advertisement, the long metal horn (which looks rather like a Sousaphone) is the main feature...and even in the standard sized cabinet it is obvious to me that it is long enough to begin to do justice to the band of frequencies inscribed on an electrical 78. In the same way the "New HMV" would do likewise. And you can see by the heading of the Apollo advertisement "Imitation is the sincerest flattery," that Craies and Stavridi, the manufacturers, felt their design may have been pirated!

The Gramophone's chatty editor, the respected Compton Mackenzie, gave it high praise: "...a most remarkable production is, how remarkable all readers of this paper will understand when I say that for the first time since I became an inveterate user of the Balmain I have genuinely doubted which performance I preferred." The Editor's Balmain was yet another custom-made machine which was more like a piece of scientific apparatus than a home phonograph. Its most notable feature was the horn mounted on floats in a tank of mercury so that the horn and soundbox could track radially across the record.

And instead of pitying the British public for having no Orthophonic Victrola until late 1927, I think we should be aware that in some ways it worked to their advantage. Many of the early electrical recordings, which did use the Western Electric equipment, are more balanced than some of the American products. I think particularly of the 1926 recording with Elgar conducting the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra in his "Cockaigne Overture" [HMV D1110 & D1111]. The sound is glorious without that pinched quality of many early electrical recordings. Some of the American material I feel had many of the less attractive resonances masked by the lush sound of the Orthophonic Credenza...glorious though it was.

Columbia waited until late 1926 to reveal what they had behind the curtain, to paraphrase their ads, and introduce their new line of machines which WERE called Viva-tonal...just like in New York. The ad, though, shows that like the HMV products. There was going to be no wasting all those old cabinets in stock. The Columbia may have had a "Stereoscopic Amplifying Chamber" but it still

Read the following Testimonial from Mr. SYDNEY GREW:—

Many musicians have made use of the gramophone, but because of these three defects have taken no personal pleasure in the instrument: the confusion in the body of the sound; the weakness, often the inaudibility, of the bass: and the distortion of tone qualities and colours. I was happy to find in the APOLLO SENIOR Apollo Super IV a gramophone in which (given a good record) these defects are either done away with or made so small as to pass without notice. All kinds of orchestral music, from the slow movement of the Haydn "Surprise" symphony to Strauss's "Ein Heldenleben," come to me by aid of the Apollo Super IV with true individuality of timbre: violas, 'cellos, the bass clarinet, tuba, cor anglais, the three trombones, and at times even the drums, are reproduced as perfectly as the instruments of higher pitch; and the pianoforte is quite characteristic. The music is therefore received in the way one receives it at a concert, and pleasure is absolute. With regard to the singing voice, I find that in addition to pure tone comes the actual human personality of the singers, so that they seem truly in the room, affording the listener the authentic thrill of art. Soft tone needles do not of necessity bring about a dwarfed tone. Loud tone needles release so mighty a volume that with certain singers the sound fills the entire house."

The only gramophone that gives the full instrumental score.

The New "His Master's Voice" Gramophone plays orchestral music exactly as you hear it from the auditorium. Not a note, not the subtlest inflection of a phrase is either blurred or indistinguishable. Every instrument is recorded at its true musical value, and the balance of the ensemble is perfectly maintained. The New "His Master's Voice" instrument adds $2\frac{1}{2}$ octaves to the range of gramophone reproduction and gives fifty per cent. increase in tone volume.

His Master's Voice

—the Gramophone that Eliminates Surface Noise.

THE GRAMOPHONE CO., Ltd., Oxford Street, London, W.1

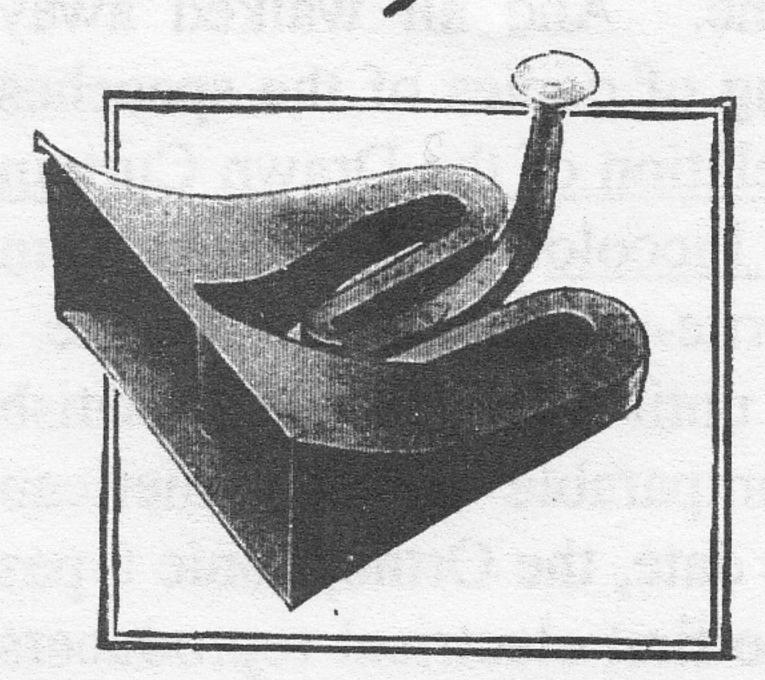

Both the NEW "His Masters Voice" and the "New Scientific Gramophone, the Columbia Vivatonal" may be new in principle, but in design they very much phonograph cabinets of the old school. It was convenient for keeping profits up when the companies could use the cabinets on hand. The British firms were lucky in that there had been little falling off in machine sales in the face of "Wireless" broadcasting in the early 20's . So why change a winning formula?

The Revelation of the Drawn Curtain

DIGGER VOLUME—fuller, richer, Dclearer—that is the outstanding characteristic of the new Viva-tonal Columbia when compared with any other gramophone. The secret of this lies in the "stereoscopic" amplifying chamber, an exclusive Columbia feature. All other gramophones depend upon long horns, straight, curved, or coiled, for their volume, but their tendency is to exaggerate or distort certain parts of the scale. This common principle was abandoned completely, and a stereoscopic chamber invented, which applying scientifically proved principles in curved sound conduits was so proportioned that it gives equal amplification of all frequencies. This Stereoscopic Chamber (actually a double horn) eliminates any possibility of exaggerating the intensity of some notes out of proportion to others and ensures in the Viva-tonal Columbia a bigger and more truly musical volume than is possible in any other gramophone.

Madumo!

Stereoscopic Amplifying Chamber that eliminates any possibility of exaggerated bass or treble and actually yields a bigger volume than any other gramophone.

Previous Advertisements have proved how the "Viva-tonal" Columbia is superior to all other gramophones in:

1.-RANGE. Raising the musical range by fully 50 per cent.

2.—DETAIL. Giving a greater wealth of inner musical detail.

3.-RESPONSE. Its two-zone soundbox yielding EVEN Response without exaggerating either bass or treble.

(from a British His Master's Voice record sleeve)

looked like a Grafonola! It was introduced to the trade in September 16th at a posh luncheon at the Connaught Rooms. "Everyone [including The Gramophone writer] was there: the luncheon itself was much the best that had been seen in similar circumstances." But of course "Everyone" who was there were the Columbia stars: Sir Henry Wood...the conductor, composer Sir Henry Cowan and the "universally popular" Arthur Brooks of Columbia, who demonstrated the machine. And all walked away with a press kit consisting of copies of the speeches and two books, The Revelation of the Drawn Curtain and From Pedal Notes to Piccolo. And judging from the effusive tone of the write-up...lots of champagne.

So it was not really until 1927 that the British public had machines comparable to the American products, and by that late date, the Orthophonic types were overlapping with the first electrical reproducers which were appearing at the same time. HMV, in fact, had a rather revolutionary one up their sleeve, using an electrostatic loudspeaker, but it never was able to be place on the market. All reports stated that the performance was astounding, but the speaker had a tendency to short. At any rate it never was introduced commercially, although it was demonstrated several times to the press.

But when HMV launched their version of the Orthophonic, the Re-Entrant Gramophone, two models were lent to The Gramophone for review, and the Expert Committee was mightily impressed! "The reports which had reached us from America of the instrument known as the Orthophonic Victrola Credenza model had caused us to look forward with some interest to the production in this country of its counterpart which HMV have named the Re-Entrant." Percy Wilson and friends got out their favourite records, wound up the Re-Entrant and were, to put it mildly, blown away. The vocal sides were wonderful, but "On the really big orchestral records we experienced the biggest thrill of all. With such records as the 'Rienzi Overture' the effect was astounding, as it was really almost possible to visualize the actual orchestra on the platform. It is not too much to say that none of us had dreamed of hearing anything so impressive from an instrument whose complete acoustical system is enclosed within the compass of a cabinet of drawing room proportions."

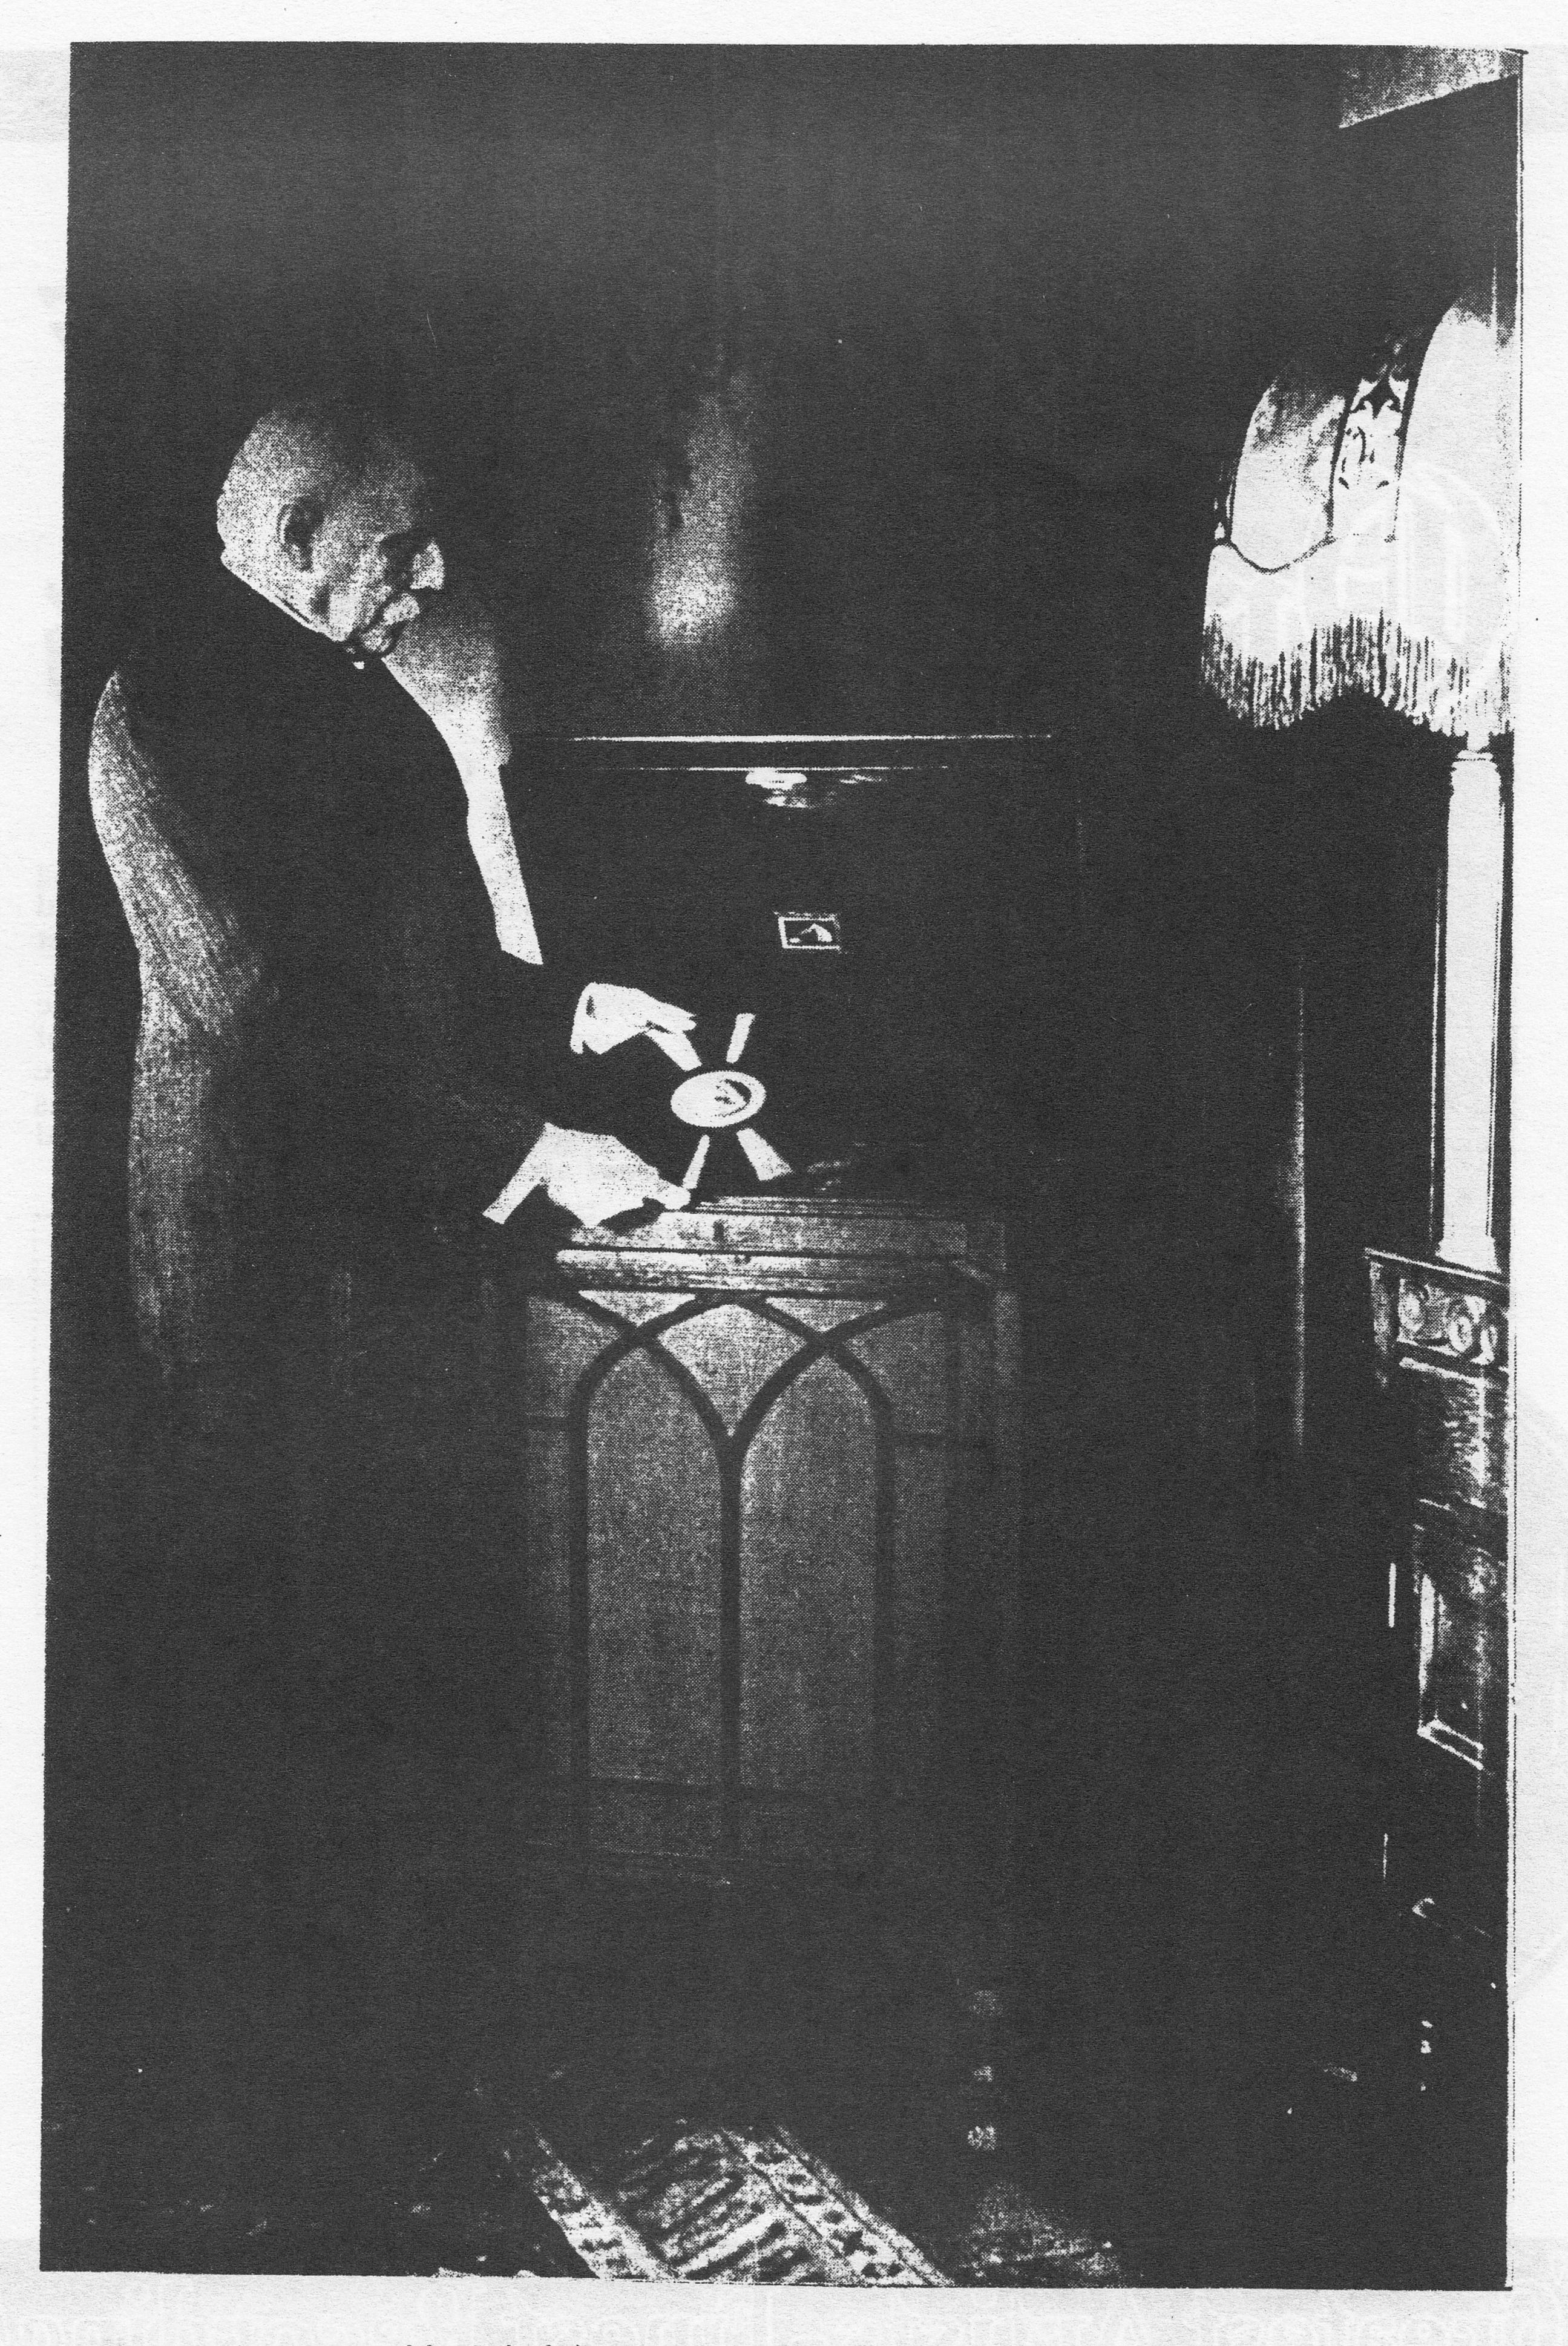

They were not completely uncritical: "...we must now mention what appears to be the weakest feature of these instruments. Surface and other extraneous noises are unfortunately pronounced. The trouble seems to line in the soundbox, which seldom appears quite free from chatter, particularly on sudden heavy passages." But for the first time they would admit that a cabinet phonograph sounded as good as one with an open horn. "In the past we have stonily advocated an open horn because it was only in this type of machine that music and science had not been subordinated to cabinet work. Now that constructive ingenuity has been worthily employed it is only proper that we should be the first to applaud."

Though the Re-Entrants were late on the scene they were sold well into the 1930s, much longer than in the United States and Canada, where the acoustic machine--other than portables--was virtually dead by 1931. They were also easier on the records; the HMV Re-Entrant soundbox was redesigned by the Hayes group and only the very earliest from the factory were like those in North America. The result was a lighter box and one that, hopefully, was without the chatter

Sir Edward Elgar, arguably Britain's greatest composer, at home with his HMV Re-Entrant Model 162. This model is the one pictured on the HMV Record jackets. It was usually seen in oak and is a very attractive machine. It seems to have been the British flag ship model, like the Victor Credenza.

the Expert Committee complained of.

And as a final note...even though it must have given the Expert Committee a wrench to write that the open horn machine was finally matched, they could rest easy when EMG Custom Made Gramophones introduced an open horned machine with a six foot horn, which remained in production until World War II, if not later. It must have warmed their hearts to test it!

Jim Tennyson is a record collector living in Toronto, Ontario.

At Left: In the early days of electrical recording HMV attempted quite a number of what we now call "live recordings...recordings of concerts, pipe organs, special events, etc. There were some very interesting results, in particular Nellie Melba's 1926 Farewell Performance at Covent Garden Opera House. But they soon discovered that the microphone which picked up the performances also, unfortunately, picked up the coughing audiences, resulting in many, many spoiled takes, and a rethinking of the policy that had been so heartily embraced in the first blush of enthusiasm over the potential of electrical recording.

Above: Percy Wilson, many years after his first blush with electrical recording, but still close to the amazing open horn of an EMG Mark X Gramophone, the exponential horn of which must have been seven feet long! It looks rather like an air funnel on an Atlantic liner; but if one is to be true to proper acoustic design, "a cabinet of drawing room proportions" is going to be difficult to achieve!

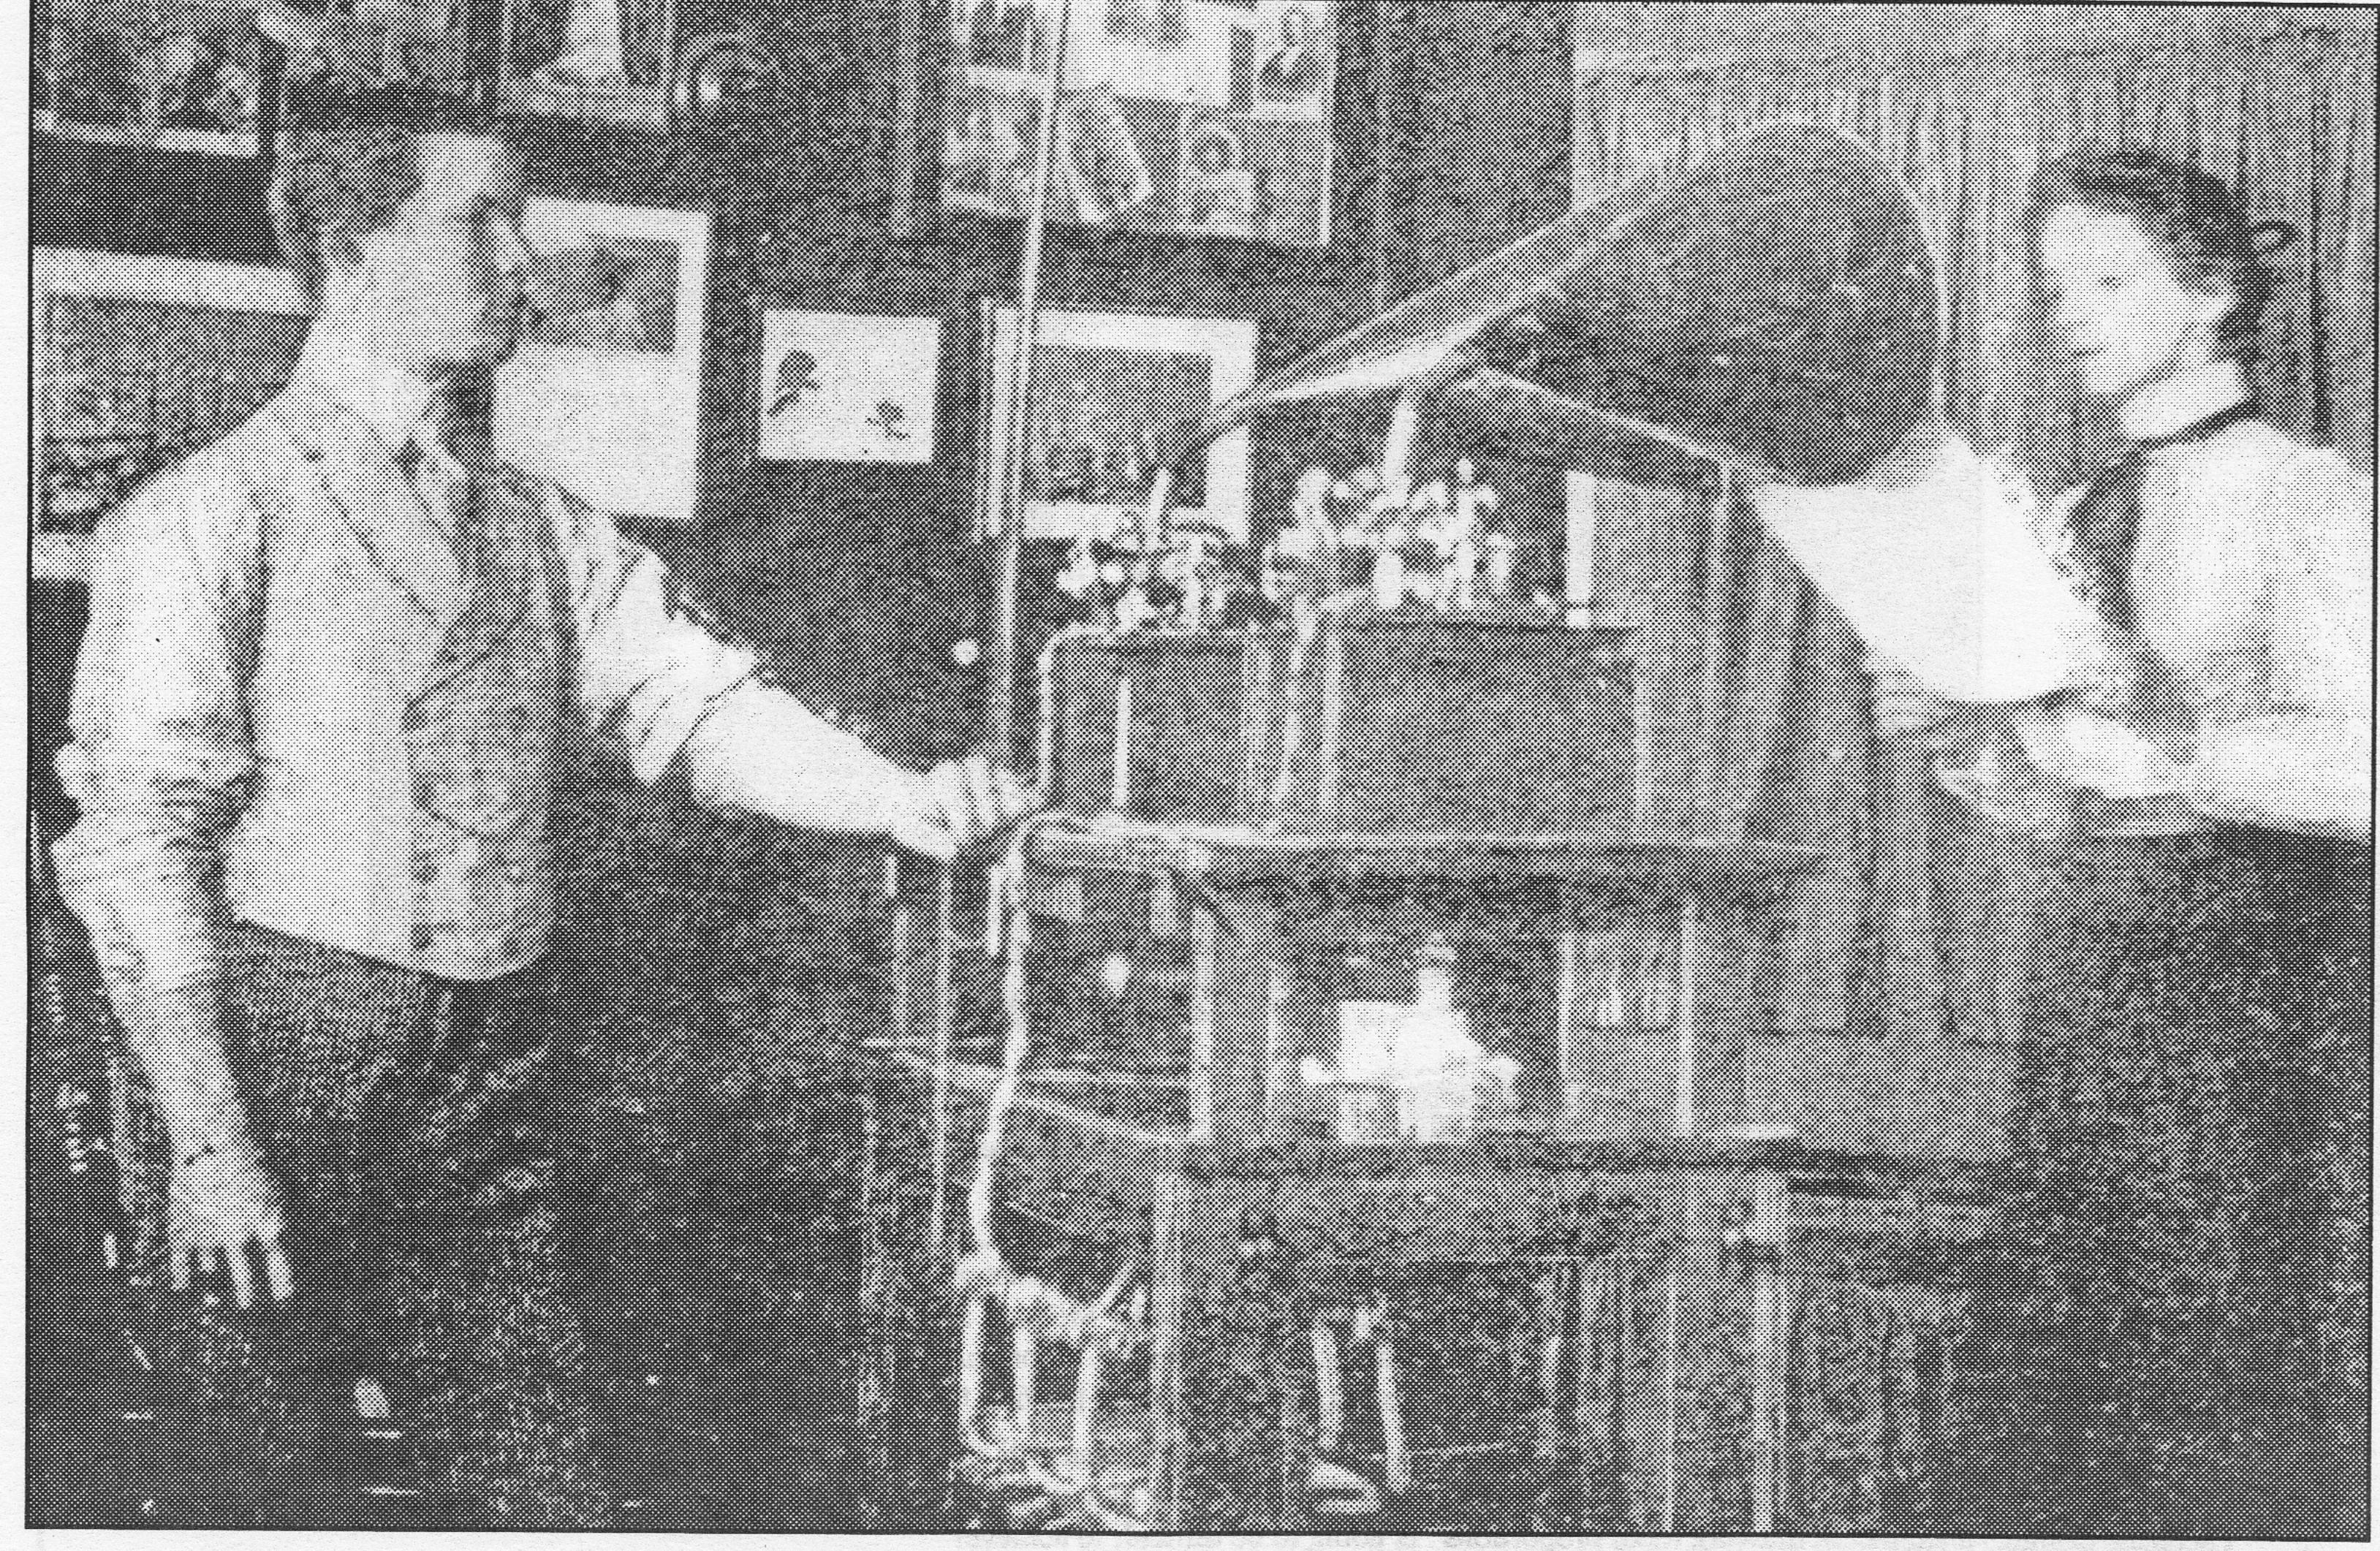

MAX MARETZEK:

KEY TO THE BETTINI RECORDING LEGACY

by Robert Feinstein

Recognition that Lieutenant Gianni Bettini was a pioneer in the recording of great voices was reported in a number of periodicals of the 1890's. As early as December 14, 1890, The New York Times referred to his activities in the following manner: "...one gentleman of this city has secured cylinders representing vocally nearly every artist of any note who has been seen here for the last year. The collection is unique...and the owner can give six hours of entertainment..."

After visiting Bettini's Judge Building studio on February 28, 1896, a Brooklyn Daily Eagle reporter wrote that Bettini had recorded: "...the voices of some of the most famous artists and singers of the world, and the collection is unequalled." Russell Hunting's trade journal, The Phonoscope, republished the article almost verbatim on December 15th of that year. And in 1899, The Phonoscope further declared that Lieutenant Bettini: "...has a collection of great historical and artistic value...a collection of beautiful voices....Calve, Nordica, Sembrich: of these and many great actors, singers, and well-known voices for posterity." Also in 1899, The Quaker echoed these sentiments in describing Bettini's laboratory: "In this studio, nearly all the brilliant stars of the operatic and concert world...have sung for the great audiences of the present, and for the millions of the future who will never see them. In the cabinets that line the walls are rolls labeled Patti, Melba, Nordica...and so on through a long list of artists."

Recording in Lt. Bettini's Judge Building Studio, circa 1899

That Lieutenant Bettini's talking machines and spider diaphragms much improved the timbre and pitch of early recordings was certainly a factor in his ability to persuade reluctant stars to go before his recording horns. So too, were his character traits of genuine courtliness, distinct likeability, and persistence. But there was something more. That other link to Lieutenant Bettini's legacy existed in the personage of Max Maretzek, the impresario who made New York City one of the opera-theatrical capitals of the world, and who introduced Italian opera to American audiences.

Max Maretzek was born in Brunn, Moravia-Czechoslovakia on June 28, 1821. At a young age, with the encouragement of his parents, he enrolled as a medical student. However, the sight of people eating a meal, with the same knife they were using to dissect a cadaver in a gross anatomy class, so disgusted him that he decided against becoming a physician. He would write about the incident: "Had it been thrust into my own flesh, the emotion I felt could not have been one whit more horrible. I felt that knife passing through my very soul. Leaping up, I rushed from the hall."

Maretzek turned his full attention to music, studying in Vienna with I. X. Siegfried. He became friends with, von Bulow, Liszt, Strauss, Öffenbach, and other composers. In 1843, he composed his first opera, Hamlet, which was produced in Brunn. The following year, Maretzek worked as an assistant to Balfe, conductor at Her Majesty's Theatre, in London. While in that city, he wrote the opera, Ricco, as well as three ballets.

In 1848, Maretzek came to New York City, where he became conductor and musical director of the Astor Place Opera House. He soon fell in love with and married a member of the troupe, singer and harpist Appolonia Bertucca. Madame Bertucca-Maretzek had sung in the earliest New York production of Rigoletto, is generally believed to have been the first woman to play in a symphony orchestra, and was vocal coach to Lillian Nordica. Max Maretzek too, taught many opera stars, in addition to coaching actors and actresses of the legitimate stage.

Among the Italian singers that Max Maretzek brought to the United States was a wonderfully talented tenor named Geremia Bettini. On December 5, 1850, Bettini made his New York debut as Edgardo in Lucia di

Lammermoor, with Madame Bertucca-Maretzek in the title role. Interestingly, Bettini would later name his only daughter Lucia, and one of his sons, Edgardo.

After Walt Whitman, who reviewed operas for The Brooklyn Daily Eagle, saw Geremia Bettini in an 1851 production of La Favorita, he poetically wrote: "His voice has often affected me to tears. Its clear, firm, wonderfully exalting notes, filling and expanding away; dwelling like a poised lark up in heaven; have made my very soul tremble." However, the tenor could be troublesome and Maretzek also wrote about him, but in whimsical, less flattering language: "Signor Bettini was a young man with a robust and vigorous voice, and a manly figure. He had but one fault. This, however, was a serious one. He had a peculiar relish for amusing himself with select parties of those he considered his friends at 'petits souppers a la Regence.' Here he would drown his brains in a Champagne –flask and afterwards lose his money at the gambling table during whole nights. The natural consequence of this would be that he was unable to sing upon the following evening."

As such, Maretzek eventually hired two detectives to keep Geremia Bettini under surveillance. They hid from view, but made notes about everyone who entered and left his quarters, virtually around the clock. Maretzek wrote: "I must confess that my two spies did their work admirably. Every morning I received from them...the most minute and authentic account of Signor Bettini's doings...As I had expected, after a few days had elapsed...a letter was brought to me from Bettini. It profoundly regretted that a violent fever would prevent him from singing in the evening...In answer to his note, he received from me an elaborate digest of all of his proceedings for the last twenty-four hours. It stated with accuracy, the number of Champagne bottles which he had emptied in the preceding day, indicating also the round sum which he had flung away at the faro table...together with sundry other interesting particulars, which it would scarcely be decorous to mention."

After Maretzek presented this report, he had little trouble in persuading Geremia Bettini to perform that night. And the bemused impresario wrote: "Never, probably in his whole life, had he sung better than he did upon this occasion...the little lesson with which my espionage had enabled me to accommodate him had a very salutary effect upon his career and his talents have subsequently placed him in the acknowledged situation of the favorite tenor(e) in Italy and Austria..."

At least one opera historian has questioned whether Maretzek was referring to Geremia Bettini or another tenor, Alessandro Bettini, for the two have often been confused. But it had to be Geremia Bettini that Maretzek was referring to because he never worked closely with Alessandro. And while Alessandro Bettini was considered an adequate singer, he was far from excellent. Moreover, he did not have anywhere near the fame of Geremia Bettini. Finally, the historian may have been unaware of a family connection. It was a tie pointed out to me in a letter I received some twenty years ago from Geremia Bettini's granddaughter.

My correspondent was the late Consuelo Rolo, who was also the daughter of Lieutenant Gianni Bettini! Max Maretzek was writing about his own brother-in-law! Apparently, his ambivalence toward Geremia Bettini did not hamper the affection that his sister, Sofia, felt for him. Geremia Bettini and Sofia Maretzek were married on April 27, 1851.

Max Maretzek continued as the most prominent impresario in New York, for many years. On February 12, 1889, a gala performance was held at the Metropolitan Opera House in tribute to his long career. Every major opera star in the city attended it. Others, who were abroad, such as Adelina Patti, sent him admiring letters. During the 1850's, Patti and her family lived next door to Maretzek's parents, on New York's East 10th Street, and she had even gone to school with two of his younger sisters, Leontine and Rosa. It was Max Maretzek who presided over the child-singer Patti's first professional opera performance.

Whether or not Lieutenant Gianni Bettini was at the concert honoring his uncle has not been determined. Neither have I been able to find out exactly how close Lieutenant Bettini and Maretzek were, before the impresario's death in 1897, although a body of evidence exists that the impresario and Sofia Maretzek Bettini had a strong bond. A listing of performers associated with Maretzek and known to have recorded for Lieutenant Bettini would, of course, include Lillian Nordica, Adelina Patti, and her husband, Ernesto Nicolini, among many others.

Surely, Lieutenant Bettini made it known exactly whom his famous uncle and father (who died in 1865) were, and that was obviously helpful in coaxing luminaries to record for him. But in a final respect, the degree with which he used their names didn't really matter. If Max Maretzek had become a doctor, Lieutenant Bettini's parents would never have met. Without Max Maretzek, there would never have been a Gianni Bettini!

Pathé Records and Phonographs in America, 1914-1922 (2nd Edition) is now available. This revised and enlarged book tells the story of the American branch of Pathé-Freres and its unique disc records, Pathéphones, Actuelle phonographs, patents, manufacturing processes, instruction books, recording artists, and dating guides. Over 200 photographs and charts are shown using original Pathé advertising material. Scores of Pathé and Actuelle disc recordings are listed in facsimiles of original release sheets and catalogs. In addition, all known American Pathé and Actuelle disc label types are shown in their original sizes and colors. Perfect record label types of the early and mid-1920's are also shown.

The book contains over 165 pages, plus illustrated endpapers. Ring binding, soft cover, 8 1/2 x 11" format. Limited printing of only 250 copies. Price: $40.00, plus $3.50 shipping. Overseas customers please add 10% surface mail. Please don't delay sending your check or money order to:

An Absolutely Stunning New Book!!

Phonographs With Flair, 1877-1977

A Century of Style in Sound Reproduction

BY TIMOTHY C. FABRIZIO AND GEORGE F. PAUL

An indescribable examination of the visual highlights of the phonographic century. This beautiful hardcover features 340 full color photographs of fashionable, funny, faddish and fabulous phonographs from the tinfoil years to the twilight of vinyl. A few examples: Douglas Phono. Co. record/machine cabinets in "Marquetrie" and Vernis-Martin finishes; Columbia "Symphony Grand;" Circassian Walnut "VTLA;" U.S. "Peerless;" VV-"XVI" in Vernis-Martin; Edison DD "A-450," "A-290," "A-425," and a "W-250" in Chinoiserie finish; VV-"XVIII" in oriental finish; Aeolian-Vocalion "900-2;" Sonora "Supremes;" several phonographs in oriental finishes; lamp phonographs, gothic models; triangular phonographs, Egyptian motifs, Edison DD "C-1;" Cecilian "treasure chest" phonograph; Capeharts; RCA changers such as "RAE-84" and "D-22;" Scott phonographs; RCA "Specials;" stylish Philcos; Farnsworth "Chairside;" Columbia's 1948 LP phonograph; over a dozen 45 rpm players from various companies; Zenith "Twin-Seven;" blond phonos from the 50s; pastel portables; massive home stereos of the 60s; egg-shaped mod units; 70s players straight from Star Wars, and much, much more! Includes index to illustrations and text, value guide, glossary, and bibliography.

An entertaining & instructive book of unprecedented breadth!
